Dear Senor Basave,

I regret not to have been able to reply to your letter of 29th. January until now, on account of a number of engagements and much correspondence which had to be dealt with immediately. I appreciate the honour of the invitation you have sent me to give you a biographical sketch of myself for publication in your national journal. P I dislike writing about myself in the first person but I have managed in the past two or three weeks to put together a story of my career and interests as a scientific humanist, and I have pleasure in enclosing the result with a portrait. You are at perfect liberty to make use of this in any way you like as an article by yourself or in any other way. All I ask is that you should send me two or three copies of the issue of your journal in which the contribution appears. It seems to me to be much better to present these particulars of my life and career in a readable article than as a kind of expanded "Who's Who".

With kind regards,

Very sincerely yours,

R. A. Gregory
