Dear Du Solier:

When I was reading over your November letter, I thought perhaps your reference to the plates was to the original drawings that I saw in your office. I thought you might have had in mind to send them. I, of course, have the ones which you sent with the manuscript, so that everything is quite all right.

I had the pleasure of seeing Ekholm in New York City last week, and he was due to leave there today and should be in Mexico in a week or ten days. I certainly hope that his work will be productive and will provide more information toward the unravelling of the complicated problems in Mexico.

Very shortly I will send down to you a reprint of an article of mine which has just been published.

Sincerely,

James B. Griffin
